If the Liver be- PILLS. bowels are constipated, or if the stomach falls to perform its functions properly, use

Ayer's Pills. They are invaluable. For some years I was a victim to Liver Complaint, in consequence of which I suffered from General Debility and Indigestion. A few boxes of Ayer's Pills restored me to perfect health.—W. T. Brightney, Henderson, W. Va.

For years I have relied more upon Ayer's Pills than anything else, to my bowels. These Pills are mild in action, and do their work thoroughly. I have used them with good effect, in cases of Rheumatism, Kidney Trouble, and Dyspepsia.—G. F. Miller, Attleborough, Mass. Ayer's Pills cured me of Stomach and Liver troubles, from which I had suffered for years. I consider them the best pills made, and would not be without them.— Morris Gates, Downsville, N. Y.

I was attacked with Billous Fever, which was followed by Jaundice, and was so dangerously ill that my friends despaired of my recovery. I commenced taking Ayer's Pills, and soon regained my customary strength and vigor. — John C. Pattison, Lowell, Nebraska.

Last spring I suffered greatly from a troublesome humor on my side. In splte of every effort to cure this cruption, it increased until the flesh became entirely raw. I was troubled, at the same time, with Indigestion, and distressing pains in

The Bowels. By the advice of a friend I began taking Ayer's Pills. In a short time I was free from pain, my food digested properly, the sores on my body commenced healing, and, in less than one month, I was cured.—Samuel D. White, Atlanta, Ga.

I have long used Ayer's Pills, in my family, and believe them to be the best pills made.—S. C. Darden, Darden, Miss. My wife and little girl were taken with Dysentery a few days ago, and I at once began giving them small doses of Ayer's Fills, thinking I would call a doctor if the disease became any worse. In a short time the bloody discharges stopped, all pain went away, and health was restored.

A MASTERLY STYLE.

fue Indescribable Charm Which Literature Receives from Expression.

Gautler is one of the writers who prove how largely the form of expresion gives literature its charm and ideas their interest. When the French say that the style is all important, they come very much nearer the truth than class of English writers who regard t as unimportant. Gautier was a critic of much delicacy and justness of feeling, but he had no new ideas to bring into the realm of art or thought. No man had less claim to be regarded as a philosopher or a sage. His views of life were often intended to be amusing, and when not so intended they usually furnish amusement for their naivete and their simplicity. They please us by the ignorance of life which they display. Gautier looked at life with the glance of a child, who finds in it much that is pretty and is wholly unconcerned as to whether there is aught to existence but picking flowers and chasing butterflies. But the style made every page that he wrote full of charm. He said of himself that his was a style of adjectives. He thought that the complications of modern life demanded a supple and complex mode of expression, that should seek words in all directions, colors from all palettes, harmonies from all lyres; his should be like the light of the setting sun, that reflects through burning clouds its varied hues. Few men knew or used so many words. He had the contents of the dictionaries from A to Z. With an eye that saw all things and a command of words that few could equal, he excelled in a gorgeous richness of description. The things which the eye could see, he saw more elearly, he described more vividly, than any other writer of this day. Of the things not visible to the eye, the whole world could show no one else so oblivious. His power of perception was the more intense, because he had no conception of the things which were beyond his observation. He never dealt with the thoughts of men, their inner life, their mental or moral development, with the mysteries of life or the problems of the future. For him such questions had no existence. But all things in life, of which the impression could strike the optic nerve, were to him things of joy. Spanish muleteers singing over the passes of the Pyrenees, Russian Princes wrapped in sables amid the mows that enveloped far rolling steppes, the minarets of St. Sophia, the sun setting over the lagoons of the Adriatic, where the cry of the gondolier breaks upon the traveler standing in the shadow of St. Mark's such things he could describe with vividness and richness which no one else could equal. He possessed also the two qualities which are found in almost all literature that can hope to survive its author, imagination and humor. His intagination was a pictorial imagination, one that was excited by subtle resemblances of form more than of feeling; but it gave life to every line he wrote, from a poem on love to a government report. Men like to be amused, and wit, more than thought, keeps books alive. Gautier's writings have not the wit of the great works, which are read forever because they forever entertain, but he had the humor which delights in the delicate congruities and incongrui-ties of words and things-the humor that always pleases and never pierces.

Built by Washington. The mill that Washington built stands in a ravine about half a mile east of Perryopolis, Fayette County. It is still in operation and propelled, as he designed, by a stream flowing down a rugged run called after the founder of the mill. The latter is, as might be expected, a rude structure. Originally it consisted of but one story, and the lines where Washington left off and the improvements, such as they were, begun are plainly discernible. The name of the present proprietor is Samuel Smith, who takes pride out of the fact that it has been kept in the Smith family since it passed from the possession of the illustrious founder. To the east of this is to be seen two of the block houses in which Washington's slaves were housed-the only ones remaining through the years since their occupany. Still further east on the elevation stands the house of Mr. Hersey, one of the original owners of that portion of the grant to Washington upon which Perryopolis was built .-Pittsburgh Leader.

Capabilities of Wells.

Various attempts are in progress to get from artesian wells not only water, but power and heat as well. Machinery is already driven by the pressure, in France, and experience shows that the heat may be increased by adding to the depth of the well. At Grenelle a well 1802 feet deep, and yielding daily 500,000 gallons, has a pressure of sixty pounds to the square inch, and the water is so hot that it is employed for heating hospitals in the vicinity. The leepest well in the world is being sunk at Pesth, Hungary, to supply hot water for public baths. It now yields daily 176,000 gallons heated to 158 degrees, and the boring is to be continued until the temperature is raised to 176 dogrees.—Arkansaw Traveler.

Not a Fair Show.

Magistrate (to prisoner)—You are charged with being drunk and disorderly and assaulting a Dutchman. What have-you to say for yourself? Prisoner-The policeman arrested me too soon, your Honor. If he had given me time for two more drinks I would have thrown my arms around that Dutchman's neck an' called him brother."—N. Y. Sun. A Gift for All.

The Railroad Problem. Thoro was a time when it was deemed sound policy for a town to stop as many ailroads as possible at its borders-to get them to its limits and not let them go any farther. That time, however, has passed away, and the best towns are those which are located upon the great through fines. Every live city now wants to draw trade and travel from as many different directions as possible -- to have all the feeders to its trade that it can get. The time has come for Decatur to appreciate this fact. There are three different railrouds which come to Decatur but have no right of way through the city. These roads do not want to have a fence built across their path, nor do they want to be forced to pay out all they get in rentals to other roads, which they are compelled to use in order to get out of town. They samply ask that they be given the right to go through the city President Hammond, of the 1, D & S, who was in town a few days ago, and in conversation with some of our calizons, that he did not want At 10 o'clock p. m. the remains will be any exchaive privileges, nor any right taken to Newsrk. JEFF. DAVIS HANQUETTED.

He Responds to the Toast "The Army and Navy of the South" MERIDIAN, Miss, May 13—A bunquet was tendered by the Southern Press Association, in this city, lust night, to Jefferson Davis. The affair was regarded as the event of the season, and attracted much attention. In replying to the toast "The Army and Navy of the South," Mr. Davis said, in part. "What was the army and may of the South? It was the patriotism of pursons, who haved their breasts to f persons who bared their breasts to outlets in defending a constitutional ight. With great navies and armies right against us, we formed regiments and bat tulions, at their head we placed Loe as their commander. With inferior numbers of men, we marched onward, fighting for our rights, and battle after battle was fought and won But the northern historians never conceded that, and indulged in triumplis of mind over matter, but now those scenes and incidents have passed and they only live in minds and history United you are, now, and if the union is ever to be broken let the other side break it. The army of the South vill shine forever around the camp fires, and will shine to our children, and to our children's children. The truths we fought for shall not encourage you to ever fight again; but keep your word in good and evil. God bless you all."

The Lady Visitor. Decatar children and adults as well were greatly favored on Sunday by the presence of Miss Harlow, of Lowell, Mass., in the city. She kindly consented to remain in the city over Subbath to visit the churches and do what she could to instruct the little folks in the simple interpretation of the day's lesson, and also give hints to teachers. She was at the Baptist church in the forenoon, at the Presbyterian church during the afternoon, and at the First Methodist church at night, talking to the children especially at each church and using the blackboard and illustrated maps to more forcibly bring out her methods. She had the closest attention of all the children and big folks. Her plan of teaching, taken as a whole, is the plainest and most simple that can be conceived, but it requires a Lelear head and ready speech, besides a morough familiarity with the lesson to attain the hest results. Miss Harlow is a public gelical teacher at Lowell, where she is a member of the Congregational clutrel. Chicago and visit various Illinois cities the greatest preservatives of life and health, but when overdone it has killed thousands of strong men by heart disease, consumption, apoplexy or paralysis. Mr. Gladstone has recruited his strength for many years by felling trees and his diet is very simple, a little fish,

some bread and cheese and half a pint of bitter ale often serving him for a dinner at his club after a hard day's work. Other brain workers, like Archbishop Whately, have had enormous appetites and been equal to three ordinary men at a dinner table. Pure air and pure water have a great deal to do with longevity, so much so that in the lake districts of Westmoreland, Eng-

Some sanitarians are always saying "take a rest; let your mind lie fallow, don't work so much," and seem to think that brain work especially is a constant drain upon one's vital capital.

Others, I believe more truly, look upon idleness as the real "thief of time," and point to the great workers who have lived to a grand old age. Mathema-ticians claim that even the absorbing mental process of working out difficult problems is conducive to longevity. Leibnitz, they tell us, lived his seventy years; Euler his seventy-six; Lagrange his seventy-seven; La-

Sir Isaac Newton died at eighty-five,

Plato at eighty-two, Archimedes at

LIVING 100 YEARS.

An Inquiry Into the Art of Longevity.

Many Theories Among Physiologists

Rules Will Not Always Protect, but Excess of Misrule is Sure to Bhorten Life. The late death of Mrs. Margaret Delaney at nearly 101 years of age, in Brooklyn, a few days ago, suggests the often debated but always interesting question of the normal duration of human life Buffon and some other authorities on animal life have said that the life of every animal should last five or six times as long as the period of its growth. The ratio generally accepted is five Thus, man takes twenty years to grow in and should therefore live to 100. With proper care, however, and regular habits as to sleep and diet, many scientists see no reason why at least half a century more might not be added to the healthy liver's century. Heller placed the limit at a little short of 200 years Old Parr is credited with having lived to the age 162. There is often great difficulty in ascertaining the exact age. If the frequent reports of the death ages of very old colored persons who in early his had been slaves be reliable it would seem as if that race were longer lived than om own If history be exact in its statements of longevity the duration of life varies according to the lapse of ages as well as civilization and chimate. An old Egyptian monument states that 110 was the limit in that country. Some of the Old Testament estimates are hard to credit. Methuselah, for instance, must have had the toughest sort of a constitution. Abraham was content with 166 years. Joseph filled exactly the Egyptian estimate The Ninetieth Psalm, which is attributed to Moses, gives 70 as the limit of vital energy. The differences in the views even of physicians as to the best means of keeping the clockwork of life going are almost as great as the original differ-ence in the timepieces themselves. Some people think it necessary to eat three or four meals a day in order to June 1940, A. D. 1887.

When a sleek, well fed man called on Abernethy and complained of a general break up in his health, the quaint old Esculapius said: "Give up your dinners; live on sixpence a day and earn it." The aucients were generally content with two square meals a day, the prandium and the cona, and many modern philosophers have found that they feel much lighter and more comfortable when they eat only twice in the twentyfour hours. Others, on the contrary, both physicians and laymen, whenever they see a person in weak health recommend more food, and when the dyspeptic answers that tough beef does not "sit easy on his bosom's lord,"the stomach-entreat him or her to take mere nourishment, such as jelly every

19 a statesman, made his skepticism about old age the more remarkable Had he lived in the time of Cicero he would probably have told that eulogist of longevity that there had never been any thing of the kind on this planet and that no human being had ever prept out of his chadle or exceeded the aursery experience "when love and aughter both were young." There we some persons like the great "doubtng Judge," Lord Ellenborough, who repel the best proved facts with an a oriori theory of probabilities. Those who don't feel like living out their century are apt to think that no one else has a mind to do so. Yet I can personally swear to having known a man aged 112, and although the fact seemed "nominated in the bond" of his ancient mariner's face and "espec-'ally the parchments of his wrinkled brow, the prrish church books, which I

Smith or Brigham Young tur green with envy. But some investiga tors are as credulous as Mr. Pickwick when he paid five pounds for the antiquarian stone in the good old Town of Rochester and discovered late that the cross upon it was not quite so ancient at the cross of Constantine. Like Henry Thomas Buckle, Sir George Cornewall Lewis first became enthused with a theory and then set to work to make history and statistics accord with it. Yet even he could scarcely deny that Martin Joseph Routh, president of Magdalen College, Oxford, lived his century; nor that Lord Saint Leonards. one of the keenest of English lawyers, lived to 96. I have only known one or two centenarians, but I could put down a dozen men and women whom I have been personally well acquainted with who have nearly approached their cen-

Prof. Humphrey, of Cambridge, England, University, who has made longevity a scientific study, does not theorise at all, but gives the numbers as he finds them in some very interest ing tables. He records the recent deaths of eleven persons, two men and nine women, who, out of fifty-two cases in which the age was a matter only of current belief, were proven to have exceeded one hundred years. One of them was a hundred and eight, another one hundred and six, beyond dispute. Of fifty-two alleged centenarians thicty-six were women and sixteen men. He attributes the greater ratio of longevity in women to their free-dom from the exposures, risks and excitements which belong to the occupations of men. That is, I suppose, that women stay more at home and drift about less, though I doubt it, at least so far as our country is concerned They are perhaps less given to overeating and drinking. Out of thirtyfive centenarian women he found that twenty-six had been married and eleven had borne large families. Of the these ancients, however, were not em- twenty-six who had been wives, inent mathematicians, but may be eight had married before they reached the age of twenty. One of them had married at sixteen and two at seventeen years of age. Prof. Humphrey found that twelve of the fifty-two contonarians were the did. On the contrary, the much eldest children of their parents, which seems to contradict the popular belief that first children are less hardy than those who follow them. Yet this notion prevails in racing stables, where "firstlings" are not depended upon for great endurance on the track But what is of more value is that this physiologist found the centenarians, without exception, to be persons of spare build, which may be a good suggestion to the American Legion of Honor, although I could name many corpulent "the father of English poetry." to 71, William Wordsworth to 80 and Walter Brooklyn citizens who are likely to outlive any "Barchones" in our midst. But Prof Humphrey says of these Savage Landor to 89. How a man of Landor's furious temper could live so happy veterans, that gont and rheumatism were, as a rule, absent. "It No life, one would think, could be seems," says the professor, "that the more exhaustive than that of a judge frame which is destined for great age who has to sit for hours together, day needs no such prophylactics, and enafter day, in a crowded court room; genders none of the peccant humors yet many of the Lord Chancellors and Uhief Justices of England, as well as Chief Justices of our own country, have

The poor may die of starvation while the rich die of excess. Dives may catch his death of cold in spite of his purple and time linen, or go off suddenly through too much turtle and too many sweethreads, while Lazarus may be sheltered by the wall, warmed by the kindly dogs, and get no peritonitis through nibbling his stale crust of very dry bread.
